It seems certain now that the request of Harry Knobloch to have his bond as treasurer fixed will be refused by the commissioners. The question will be disposed of Friday. The commissioners have frequently declared that they would be guided by Prosecutor Krichbaum's written advice. The latter has stated that he would oppose giving permission to Knobloch to resume the office he resigned. Prosecutor Krichbaum not only contends that when Knobloch resigned, he resigned for the present term and the coming term, but that he is ineligible on account of the indictments for embezzlement pending against him.

Bill Wuz There and So Wuz Deacon Squiggs.

Yet Kan't Keep the Folks at Bever-lee Frum Peepin' in at William B., by Heck, Even ef He Did Have His Back Turned and His Eye on the Preacher.

By Sun Leased Wire.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 16.—Dawn crept imperceptibly over Beverly this morning, the faint streaks of rosy light quivered in the rolls of mist high above. It was the forerunner of a dull, gray day; a day full of dull gray clouds and dull gray news. And this story was percolated through the town between the scattering drops of rain. Deacon Zachariah Squiggs peeked surreptitiously from the vestibule of his church at 10:25 yesterday morning, and cocked one eye in the direction of the Unitarian church, half a block away, where a crowd of constantly increasing numbers was gathering to await the arrival of the president.

"Consume it," muttered the deacon, as he went back into the deserted ante-room and laid one hand on the bell rope. "Consume it, if that ain't the toughest—," and then the deacon thought unto himself and did a rash thing.

Never before had he entered the door of the Unitarian church, but his curiosity outweighed his sectarianism and he mounted the steps. In the gallery he found a place, and that was better anyway, he thought, for it com-

"What's he?" he whispered to his neighbor, as the preacher began the reading of the first lesson.

"Fifth row from the front, center section, just off the left aisle. See him?" was the answer.

"Yep," the deacon replied triumphantly, and he gazed long and hard at the presidential back.

Then the deacon remembered something and he nearly fainted where he sat.

"By hector!" he muttered, "the collection box. Blamed if I didn't clean forget it!"

In his patriotic enthusiasm Deacon Squiggs that for many Sundays in the past thirty-six years he had not missed passing the plate. He tiptoed out of the gallery and down the stairs. His record coming from the other church was as nothing compared to the time he made going back.

In his own church pivoted every eye toward him for a moment in pitying consternation and then wheeled slowly back toward the preacher for the one lamb who had wandered from the fold than for the ninety-and-nine that remained.

INSANE FROM FRIGHT, MRS. FRANK HUFER PUT UP BATTLE WHEN HOUSE BECOMES ENVELOPED IN FLAMES—FINALLY SURRENDERS

By Sun Leased Wire.

Galveston, Tex., Aug. 17.—A fight with mosquitoes in mid-ocean is an unprecedented experience which the Mallory liner Denver, Captain Young and his passengers had off the coast of Louisiana 80 miles, enroute from New York to Galveston.

A cloud could be seen for a long distance through the glasses and was being studied as a new phenomenon of the sea, when long-billed insects struck the ship. They soon drove officers, crew and passengers from the decks and to the saloon and state rooms to where the pests accompanied their victims.

room to room she tried to rush back into the fire in a mad effort to save some of her property.

Detectives Ryan and Brislin, who had arrived after the alarm of fire was turned in, seized her as she tried to get past them. The woman fought desperately for some time before she finally surrendered.

The fire burned the larger part of the furnishings in two rooms. Water and fire caused a damage of about $200.

PUSH CART WAR A MARKED MAN PROVES FATAL IS MURDERED

Big Bill Habernicht, Policeman, Shot by a New York Foreigner.

CROWD THREATENS FEELING IS BITTER

By Sun Leased Wire.

New York, Aug. 17.—There has never been more excitement around Harlem market and in the neighborhood of First avenue and 103rd street than there was when a quarrel between two push-cart men reached a climax and one of them drew a pistol and fired twice.

The men were walking along First avenue, quarreling over some cars of corn, when the shots were fired and the man with the pistol turned and fled.

Neither of the shots struck anyone, but in an instant the street was in an uproar. The man was soon cornered, and he backed against a building and waved his pistol. "I'll kill any man who comes near me," he cried, and everybody stopped but Big Bill Habernicht, a policeman.

He leaped forward and shot the man. Just as he did a third shot was fired and Habernicht dropped. The man who shot didn't pause but darted into 104th street and disappeared.

When the pursuers heard that Big Bill was dead they roared, and it was like thunder. They raved and vowed that they would catch the murderer and hang him to a lamp-post.

Archibaldi, an Italian detective of the New York department, gathered from a description of the fugitive whom no one seemed to know that he was Antonio Bescone, the keeper of the vegetable shop on East 118th street. Archibaldi found Bescone elsewhere, however, and though he protested he knew nothing of the shooting, he was arrested. On his way to the station the crowd made repeated attempts to get at him.

Bescone was entirely innocent, which was developed in a few hours when a peddler named Liberte Di Tomone was brought in on suspicion.

He confessed that he had done the shooting in self-defense, he said, concluding that Habernicht attacked him in the market place, where the row began and followed him up.

Wealthy Italian Merchant at Elkhart, Ind., Shot to Death by a Countryman.

FEELING IS BITTER

By Sun Leased Wire.

Elkhart, Ind., Aug. 17.—Having been marked for death in a vendetta of long standing, Frank Fortino, a wealthy Italian merchant, met his fate here this morning, when he was shot to death by Tony Tino, a fellow countryman.

The killing took place in Fortino's bottling works at 9 o'clock. The slain Italian was a licensed wholesale liquor dealer. The assassin escaped, and it is reported tonight that he is being surrounded by Sheriff Setzel and a posse, including a number of Elkhart police in a cemetery near Oscoda, six miles west.

Bitter feeling between Fortino and Tino sprang up last March when Mrs. Rosa Fortino, wife of the murdered man's brother, Philip Fortino, eloped with Pasquale Rodo, whom Fortino is alleged to have aided.

The slain man was the leader and counselor of the Italian colony. More than a score of his friends have armed themselves and joined the search for the fugitive, with the intention of avenging the murder.
